

Summary in English

The third issue of the 2022 academic bulletin “Refugees: Today and Tomorrow” analyzes the dynamic and unpredictable situation of the people fleeing Ukraine and seeking temporary protection in Bulgaria, focusing on the waves of arrival and patterns of reception. The issue includes the good news of the revival of one of the most valuable initiatives in the field of the refugee law: the legal clinics that UNHCR and Sofia University have been jointly organizing since this academic year. Subsequent articles focus on the challenges of teaching Bulgarian as a foreign language in Bulgaria; how quality is managed in organizations working with refugees; and the role of the cultural mediation in working with refugees and migrants. We also present the good practice of the “Ethnology and Cultural Anthropology” programme at Sofia University in involving students in extracurricular activities with refugees. Another interesting highlight are ideas on how to increase the knowledge about refugees, from a survey done with students at Sofia University. Last but not least, is the intriguing text presenting the life and search of an Afghan woman through the reading of the film of the Iranian director Samira Mahmalbaf’s “Five in the Afternoon” (2003).
